Unveiling of Soldier and Sailors Memorial.

AND CURTIN STATUE

Brilliant Street Parade and Splendid Exercises Mark the Occasion—Governor Pennypacker Makes an Address—Other Prominent Speakers.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND PEOPLE PRESENT

One of the most important events that ever transpired in Bellefonte was the unveiling Friday, June 8th of the Soldiers and Sailors Monument and Curtin Statue. Everything seemed to work together to make this affair successful in every particular. The weather although warm was clear and beautiful, the old town never looked prettier, nor was it ever more tastefully or elaborately decorated, streets were cleaned up, and the homes of the people, were thrown wide open to receive the invading thousands who came to partake of our hospitality.

And the crowd was here all right, such a crowd as was never within our boundaries before. And for order and good behavior, it simply could not have been better. The Burgess had his well organized police force kept perfect order, with a very few arrests. The people however were well behaved, so it was not a hard task to preserve peace.

The crowd began to gather on Thursday and when Governor Pennypacker and other State dignitaries reached here at 8:16 Thursday night there was probably 1500 people at the station to greet them. Governor Pennypacker was the guest of Col. E. R. Chambers while in Bellefonte and on Thursday evening he was tendered a reception at Col. Chambers house. Hundreds of our citizens took advantage of this opportunity to pay their respects to the chief magistrate of this great Commonwealth.

The Governor's staff was entertained at the Brockerhoff house. Friday saw hundreds of old time residents back in our midst renewing old acquaintances and looking up their old stamping grounds. There were special trains on all railroads and they began to pour their crowds into town early in the morning. From miles around people came in buggies, automobiles and every kind of conveyance. When the hour for the parade arrived it is estimated that 15000 people lined the streets along the line of parade. High street from the Diamond to the Pennsylvania Station was one mass of people.

The parade formed on Thomas street and began to move at 10:30 a. m. The route of parade was as follows: Up High to Allegheny; out Allegheny to Linn, out East Linn and countermarch to Allegheny to Bishop, counter-march on East Bishop to Spring, to West High, countermarch to North Spring and dispense. On the return from East Linn street Governor Pennypacker and staff reviewed the parade from the reviewing stand in the Diamond.

The parade moved in the following order.

Chief Marshall, Gen. John I. Curtin; Chief of Staff, Capt. H. S. Taylor; Col. Elder of 5th Regiment and staff; 5th Regiment Band; 5th and 12th Regiments; Governor Pennypacker and staff; General Gobin and staff; General Wiley and staff; County Commissioners; Borough Council; Carriages containing Distinguished Guests; State College Cadets, Capt. Way; Sheridan Troop, Capt. Crawford; G. A. R., Gen. Austin Curtin; Pennsylvania Reserves, Owen Jones; Sons of Veterans; Carriages and Autos; Civic Organizations, Maj. H. Sechler; Milesburg Band; Ne-ha-sa-ne Tribe Red Men; Centre Castle, K. G. E. of Spring Mills; P. O. S. of A., of Bellefonte; Curtin Band; Fire Department, H. C. Quigley; Coleville Band; Logan Fire Company; Undine Fire Company; State College Band, Provisional Cavalry; Thomas Beaver.

Everyone who saw the parade pronounced it the finest ever witnessed in Bellefonte. It moved promptly and there were no unpleasant stops or waits. Gov. Pennypacker and staff received a cordial greeting and the Governor was kept bowing his acknowledgement all along the route of parade.

The State College cadets under Capt. Way presented a magnificent appearance. They marched like regulars and were greeted with cheers on all sides.

The Sheridan troops of Tyrone under Captain Crawford aroused enthusiasm from the people. They are the second oldest cavalry troop in the state and their soldierly bearing Friday won praise from the assembled spectators.

We might also mention favorably the soldiers of the 5th and 12th regiments, the P. O. S. of A. and the K. G. E. Then there were the Red Men in their gaudy regalia who livened up the parade considerably.

One of the most touching things in the whole parade was veterans of 61-65 marching to pay this last tribute to fallen comrades and the great War Governor. In their midst was Owen Jones, of Philadelphia, bearing proudly aloft the old battle scarred flag of the Pennsylvania Reserves.

The Logan and Undine fire companies presented a manly appearance, and drew their full share of attention and applause.

It was 12:30 before the last man had passed the re-viewing stand and the parade was dismissed.

THE AFTERNOON'S EXERCISES.

The dedicatory exercises began in the afternoon at 1:30 from the re-viewing stand in the Diamond. General James A. Beaver was the chairman of the meeting.

He made the introductory address. Five hundred school children from Bellefonte and surrounding towns sang "America." The presentation of the Curtin statue on behalf of the State commission was made by Governor Pennypacker, and it was received on behalf of the county commissioners by W. C. Heinle.

The presentation of the soldiers' monument on behalf of the contributor was made by John G. Love and it was received on behalf of the county commissioners by Colonel J. L. Spangler.

GRANDDAUGHTER UNVEILS STATUE.

The Curtin statue was unveiled by Miss Margaret Burnett, a granddaughter of the "Old War Governor," and the soldiers' monument was unveiled by Miss Helen Fox, a daughter of the late Joseph Fox, a gallant soldier in the Civil War.

Following the unveiling the children's choir sang "The Star Spangled Banner," at the conclusion D. F. Fortney Esq., read Col. A. K. McClure's address. Col. McClure was unable to be present owing to ill health. In the address he paid high tribute to the patriotism, wisdom and valor of Pennsylvania's great War Governor. Jacob A. Cramm, of Harrisburg, paid a tribute to Governor Curtin on behalf of the Soldier's Orphans and Adjutant General J. Stewart made an address on "The American Private Soldiers." The meeting closed with the singing of "Tenting To-night on the Old Camp Grounds."

What They Have Done.

The query of what the Bellefonte Chapter D. A. R., have done can be answered in the following statement:

The contribution to the Curtin Memorial and Soldiers Monument was $175.

Through a member of the chapter the names of the Revolutionary soldiers, buried in Centre county, were furnished for the monument.

A handsome marker was erected at Potters Fort, in 1898, to preserve that historic spot. In the same year they gave a contribution towards the Division Hospital, at Chickamauga of $72.

To the Soldiers Club House at Manila $5.

To the Relief Fund of widows and orphans of the Spanish War, $25.

Contribution valued at $22, to Co. B, and upon their return home a reception was given them.

Annual prizes given the schools for Revolutionary essays.

A room furnished and kept in repairs at the Bellefonte Hospital.

Other work of interest only to the chapter is also kept up.

WESTERNLAND AGROUND

Struck the South Shoals Near Entrance to Delaware Bay

POSITION AN EASY ONE

There Are More Than 1000 Persons on Board but Passengers are All Quiet.

STRONG BREEZE SUNDAY NIGHT

Cape May, N. J., June 22.—With more than 1,000 persons on board the American line steamship, Westernland, from Liverpool and Queenstown, for Philadelphia, is hard aground on the south shoals near the entrance to Delaware bay. The big steamer struck the shoals about 10.15 o'clock Sunday morning as it was about to enter the bay on the north side. The shoals are about four miles off the Cape May shore and one mile north of the Overfalls lightship. Although the Westernland is hard aground the vessels lies in an easy position and strong hope is entertained that the steamer will be floated with the assistance of tugs on the high tide soon. There was no pilot on the steamship when it stranded. Captain Turner expecting to take aboard a guide near the Overfalls light.

The Westernland was steaming under full headway when the shoals were struck. The engines were reversed, but the vessel was so hard aground that it was impossible to back off and signals were hoisted for assistance. The only vessel in the vicinity at the time was the steam pilot boat Philadelphia which responded to the signals. The sea was smooth and a hawser was easily passed to the steamer but the pilot boat was not powerful enough to move the liner. After three or four attempts the tide became so low that further efforts to float the vessel were abandoned until the next high tide.

Realizing that they were hard and fast on a shoal in the ocean for at least hours with the sea roughening and a southern storm approaching the officers of the steamer set about assuring the passengers that there was no danger. There are on board seventy-two cabin and 775 steerage passengers and a crew of 270. While some wrought up with fear of something happening they were easily assured that there was no need to worry and there was practically no excitement among the passengers.

The Westernland was plainly visible from the Cape May beach during the day. When darkness fell Monday evening a strong northeast wind was blowing and the steamer was surrounded by a moderate rough sea.

Life saving crew No. 40, under Captain James W. Eldridge, was out to the steamer's assistance as soon as it was seen that pilot boat was unable to float her and the crew stood by all afternoon and returned early in the evening. Captain Eldridge brought ashore dispatches from Captain Turner for tugs. Captain Eldridge said that while the sea is rough there was no danger of anything happening to the steamer at this time. He said a Delaware river pilot is in charge and that the passengers are quiet.

Monday night the life savers returned to the steamers and will remain aboard until the vessel is floated.

Cape May, N. J., June 12.—The steamer Westernland, from Liverpool and Queenstown for Philadelphia, which grounded on the shoals at the entrance to Delaware Bay early Monday, was floated at 11:40 Monday night.

After the futile attempt to float the big liner on the noon tide Monday nothing was done until the night tide came up when several tugs fastened hawsers to the steamer and the vessel was pulled off the shoals without much difficulty. After clearing the shoals the Westernland swung around and steamed to the Delaware breakwater, where the liner will remain until morning.

To Open Bellefonte Safe.

Frank E. Harder, the professional safe cracker, went to Bellefonte this morning to help Hazel Bros. open their safe: Mr. Harder received a telephone message Monday stating that the safe refused to be opened and he will undoubtedly solve the mystery in a very short time.—Tuesday's Lock Haven Express.

Womelsdorff on the Stand.

Hon. P. E. Womelsdorff, of Philipsburg who is one of the most prominent mining engineers in this part of the state, was one of the witnesses before the Inter-State Commerce Commission at Philadelphia Friday in the probing of the Pennsylvania railroad company in connection with the mining interests of the state. He testified that so far as he has been able to learn the Pennsylvania railroad "has no systematic, regular way of rating coal mines." He told how, last year, he had rated the Hilledale mine in Indiana county, which the railroad had given a capacity of 375 tons a day, and found it 800 tons.

"The railroad rate sheet I went by," said Mr. Womelsdorff, "had nearly exhausted mines rated above their capacity rated one worked-out mine and included another not on the railroad at all."

COMMENCEMENT WEEK

At the Pennsylvania State College.

OPENED LAST SUNDAY

Graduating Address by Frank Pierrepont Graves, of Columbia, Mo.

LARGE CROWD IN ATTENDANCE

The forty-seventh annual commencement of the Pennsylvania State College began Sunday morning with the preaching of the baccalaureate sermon in the new auditorium by Rev. William Patterson, D. D., of Philadelphia. Rev. Mr. Patterson took as his subject "Intellectual and Spiritual Development," and said, in part:

"The law of nourisment holds good in all kingdoms. A tree to grow must be nourished. A child to grow must be fed. If our minds are to grow rich and strong they must be nourished with intellectual food. A person that lives in a poorly ventilated factory and sleeps in a poorly ventilated room will become unhealthy and the person who neglects a right to intellectual atmosphere will remain in ignorance and ineffectiveness in life.

"Constant study is necessary for the strengthening of the intellect. We must watch against the things that hinder our development, whether that development be physical, intellectual or spiritual."

Over nine hundred visitors throng the hotels, dormitories and fraternity houses, and "Old State" looks forward to a splendid commencement week. President Atherton is convalescing from his recent serious illness, and the college rejoices over the steady improvement of his health, which will not permit, however, of his taking an active part in this week's exercises.

Although the baccalaureate sermon marked the official opening of the commencement exercises, the festivities really began Saturday evening with a delightful concert in the auditorium by the college orchestra and glee club. A big crowd was in attendance and thoroughly enjoyed the performance, the "Alma mater" songs being especially productive of enthusiasm.

The graduating exercises at State College are drawing large crowds to that famous institution of learning.

One of the features of Tuesday's commencement exercises was the re-election of James A. Beaver, J. G. White and H. L. Heister, old trustees, and the election of the following new ones: A. C. Read, G. M. Downing, C. G. Hutchinson and Richard Calder, Jr. The annual meeting of the alumni association, the alumni delegates and the Phi Kappa Phi fraternity were also held Tuesday. The winner of the cash prize in Monday night's junior oratorical contest was J. F. Smith, of Yellow Creek. The six contestants and their subjects were as follows. "The Need of a New Individualism," John F. Smith of Yellow Creek; "Independence and Freedom," Robert P. Grahman, Altoona; "The Man with the Muck Rake." Funderson A. Rainey, Laceyville; "Immigration and Naturalization," Calvin J. Adams, Stull; "The Man Who Wins," Joseph E. Staud, Allegheny; "The Degeration of the Senate," James B. Long, King of Prussia.

Wednesday morning at 10 a. m. the Graduating exercises of the Class of 1906 were held in the Schwab Auditorium. The Commencement address was delivered by Frank Pierrepont Graves, Ph. D., LL. D., of Columbia, Mo. It was eloquent and forceful.

A SAD ACCIDENT.

Earl Aikey Age 5 Accidentally Shot by Elder Brother.

The older brother was shooting birds when he accidentally shot his brother on the right of the head near the temple. An Angel In the Web

By Sidney H. Cole

Copyright, 1905, by P. C. Eastment

All day long the pitiless heat beat down on the pavements, and at night when Mather came home to his little room on the second floor he found it a veritable oven. Sleep in that place was out of the question. He turned out the single gas jet and went down to the street. On the stoop were noisy, chattering groups, waiting vainly for a breeze from the water. There was much banter between the occupants of neighboring stoops and much high pitched laughter. The steps of his own lodging house, like the rest, bore its quota, but he felt no inclination to join them. Instead he walked out to the avenue and turned aimlessly downtown.

He had proceeded but a short distance when the strident notes of a cornet and trombone and the pulsating boom of a bass drum fell on his ears. Above the din sounded shrill voices, quavering a hymn. He had never yet attended a street corner service of the Salvation Army, and it struck him that this would be an excellent opportunity to do so. He quickened his steps and soon came upon them, men and women alike kneeling on the dirty pavements, while a raucous voiced lieutenant offered a prayer. A flaring gasoline torch on a nearby fruit stand lighted the scene uncannily and threw into flickering relief the faces of varied types crowded about the kneeling figures.

Mather was country born and bred. Years of life on the farm had given him a big frame and a pair of shoulders that many an athlete might have envied. It was an easy matter for him to elbow his way through the crowd to the inner edge of the circle, where he stood quietly watching the little drama before him with mild curiosity and even milder amusement.

The prayer finished, the little band arose, and the men replaced their caps. The lieutenant announced a hymn, the cornet squealed, the trombone brayed, the drum boomed valiantly, and the quavering voices rose once more on the hot night air.

At the conclusion of the hymn the lieutenant announced that they would listen to a few words from Sister Ruth. A slight, girlish figure stepped to the center of the circle from somewhere in the shadow. The light of the gasoline torch fell full upon her face—a face of wonderful purity and sweetness. There was a beauty in the level brows, the long dark lashes of the eyes and the full, red lips that the bonnet of the corps could not hide, and there was a supple grace of figure that the plain blue dress did not wholly conceal.

[illegible] earnest appeal. What she was saying Mather did not know, for he paid no heed to her words. He was not an impressionable young man—indeed, by his friends he was adjudged unusually hard headed and abundantly possessed of that quality generally termed "horse sense." But there was something that appealed to him strongly in that face beneath the regulation poke bonnet. He did not take his eyes from her while she was speaking, and when she had finished and stepped back into the shadow he was aware of a strange feeling, half of sadness, half of buoyancy. He elbowed his way out and walked homeward, strangely perturbed and strangely elated.

The following night and every night after that Mather attended the street corner meetings. If Sister Ruth spoke or prayed or sang he was supremely happy; if others filled her place he was aware of a feeling of disappointment. Being unskilled in the analysis of emotion, he did not recognize the trend of it all. He only knew that he wanted to be near her, to see her face, to listen to her voice.

One night as the women of the corps were passing the tambourines for the collection he beheld Sister Ruth coming in his direction through the crowd. She was smiling and nodding gratefully as the nickels and dimes fell jingling into the tambourine. Standing beside Mather were three young fellows, evidently the worse for liquor. As Sister Ruth approached them one of the three lifted his foot and kicked the tambourine smartly.

"Little h-higher, Gertie. I c'n kick higher 'n th-that," he hiccoughed familiarly.

Mather's hand fell on the fellow's coat collar with a grip of iron.

"Apologize for that! Hear me? Apologize!" he said in a voice shaking with anger.

"Eh? What?" said the other. He looked up at Mather. Mather towered inches above him. There was, moreover, something very sinister in his eyes.

"I 'pologized," began the captive hastily.

Mather felt a light touch on his arm. He turned to find Sister Ruth standing beside him.

"Don't hurt him, please don't," she begged.

Mather smiled grimly.

"It's just as you say," said he. "I'll kill him if you say so."

"Let him go, please," she said, and Mather pushed the man away.

"Thank you," she said. Her eyes met his squarely; she blushed and hesitated a moment. "Thank you," she said again and was gone. That night Mather walked home on air.

* * * * * * *

Mather climbed the dingy stairs to the little hall at the corps barracks. It was Sunday evening. Outside the rain was falling dismally and the gutters ran rivers of mud. He sat down quite alone on one of the rear settees. A handful of people nearer the platform were the only others in the bare, cheerless place.

There were hymns and prayers and testimony quite as usual, and during it all Mather sat back in the shadows feasting his eyes on the outlines of a pretty face beneath a poke bonnet at one side of the platform.

Presently during the singing of a hymn Mather saw her coming down the aisle toward him, and his heart stood still. She stopped beside him, and her face flushed.

"Were you looking for—for salvation?" she faltered.

"No," said he quietly, "I was looking for—you."

She looked a trifle frightened. He saw the color suddenly leave her cheeks.

"Please sit down for a minute," he begged. She hesitated, then reluctantly complied. The hymn still went on stridently. Mather looked thoughtfully at the unshaded gas jets above the platform for a time.

"I need you more than the army does," he said at length. "I want you to leave it."

"Oh!" she gasped, drawing away from him.

"I realize you know nothing about me," he went on hurriedly. "I'm foreman in a machine shop. I make good wages. So far I've lived a life I'm not ashamed of. But I want you to satisfy yourself as to the truth of all this, of course."

She looked at him curiously.

"What do you know of me?" she asked.

"That I love you," said he stoutly.

"Is that enough?"

"Yes, that's enough," he declared.

She turned away from him for a moment. When he saw her face again her eyes were filled with tears.

"This work is very dear to me," she said.

He was silent.

"But of all men you are the one I should trust."

"And love?" he asked breathlessly.

There was a long pause.

"And love," she said very softly.

They were starting the last verse of the hymn, but Mather heard nothing of it. The bare, bleak room had suddenly become a glorious paradise. The yellow gas jets were glittering stars in a blue velvet sky. Sister Ruth's hand was in his.

Time to Congress.

A poor man had better keep out of congress. Campaign expenses are heavy and they come every two years. No man can go to congress without neglecting his law practice or his business. If he is a poor man he will probably lose his clients or his customers; a small business or practice will not support partners or managers. After a few years in congress nine men out of ten are beaten for renomination, and then, if they have not a fortune or an established business to fall back on, they will try to get some small salaried place under the government and may not be successful.—Philadelphia Record.

The Shepherd's Crook.

Although most people have seen a shepherd's crook, many do not know the use of it. Some people think that all the shepherd carries it for is to use it as a walking stick when he tramps to and from the fold. But the crooked end itself serves a purpose. It enables a shepherd to catch refractory sheep. If a sheep shows signs of running away the crooked end has only to be placed round his leg, and he is a captive.—London Standard.

A Book on a Page.

Some of the feats attributed to ancient masters of caligraphy are almost past belief. Ælian knew an artist who wrote a distich in letters of gold, which he inclosed in the rind of a grain of corn. Oxford boasts a portrait of Charles I. which has as the lines of the head and ruff characters setting forth the book of Psalms, the creed and the Lord's Prayer. In the British museum is a portrait of Queen Anne about the size of one's hand. Upon it are what seem at first sight to be certain scratches, but which prove to be a transcript of a book. The "Iliad" of Homer in a nutshell, which Cicero is said by Pliny to have seen, sounds impossible, but it has been shown that the thing is feasible, given the man and that man the patience. A thin sheet of vellum, capable of folding easily, has been found to take 7,500 verses upon one side and the same number on the reverse. There you have the 15,000 verses of the "Iliad," all upon a single slip of vellum. The latter folds up, and readily, and you have your Homer in a nutshell.—St. James' Gazette.

Kept His Nerve.

An English clergyman had a rich parishioner, Lady Blank, who dictated to and hectored him outrageously. At length he declined to put up with this kind of treatment and told her ladyship so. Thereafter she refused to put anything in the offertory, merely making a stately inclination over the plate. This moved an elder to remark in her hearing, "We could do with less of her manners and more of her cash." The clergyman, dining at a lord's table, told this story with great success one evening. The host said with a frown, "Are you aware, sir, that Lady Blank is a relative of mine?" The clergyman smiled slightly. "No," he said, "I wasn't, but in future when I tell the story I'll always be careful to mention the relationship."

Where They Met.

Angry Wife (after a quarrel)—Seems to me we've been married about a hundred years. I can't even remember when or where we first met. Husband (emphatically)—I can. It was at a dinner party, and there were thirteen at table.—London Tit-Bits

A thousand times listen to the counsel of your friend, but seek it only once.—Hardy.

Eminent Doctors Praise its Ingredients.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues "In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhœa; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women, constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa (suppressed or absent monthly periods), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and anæmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which is most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation)."

Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

HOW BEAST MEN ARE MADE.

The Hideous and Cruel Practice of Flesh Sculpture In China.

"Victor Hugo, in 'The Man Who Laughs,'" said an ethnologist, "tells of the sculptors of living flesh—those horrible people of the middle ages who kidnaped tender little children and turned them into all sorts of monsters, dwarfs, hunchbacks and the like, selling them afterward for jesters or for showmen's freaks.

"The hideous and cruel practice of flesh sculpture still continues. There is a tribe of Chinese gypsies who steal children and turn them into so called wild men. The practice is, of course, illegal.

"A kidnaped child is flayed alive, bit by bit, and the shaggy skin of a dog is grafted on him. This takes a year. At the year's end the poor creature is shaggy, like a bear, from head to foot.

"The child's vocal chords are destroyed with charcoal in an unspeakably cruel way. He can never speak thereafter. He can only growl and moan like a beast.

"He is imprisoned in a perfectly black hole until every vestige of reason leaves him. Nine months is usually a sufficient confinement to accomplish this.

"Finally, speechless, shaggy, lunatic, the victim is sold to a traveling showman and is exhibited throughout China as a genuine wild man or beast man. I am bound to say he looks the part."

HOG MONEY.

Origin of the Curious Old Brass Coins of Bermuda.

"Hog money" is the name by which the brass money which began to be struck in Bermuda in 1650 came to be known. On one face of it was a hog, on the other a ship of that period. These old coins are very rare and highly prized by collectors.

The history of this device is curious and interesting. A Spanish vessel, commanded by Juan Bermudez, on its way to Cuba with a cargo of hogs, was wrecked there. This was in 1515. Later in the same century, when the English discovered this land, they found a country inhabited by hogs.

It is also interesting to note that the English discovered it in the same way as the Spaniards. An English ship was wrecked there. Is it any wonder that the treacherous coast got from Spanish and English alike the name of Devil's Land? Yet it is one of the most beautiful coasts in the world, and it has been claimed that in brilliancy Mediterranean effects are not at all equal to those of Bermuda.

Bermuda is said to be the island of Shakespeare's "Tempest." The strange noises which mariners heard coming from this island, and which they did not then know were produced by hogs, caused them to say that it was haunted and to report weird things of it.—Pearson's.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

Money Wisely Expended Is Safely and Profitably Expended.

Beautified utility is never too costly. Over and over again the cost benefits of public improvements have been proved, defined, established. It is true of public betterments of a sanitary character; it is true of public betterments that look to commercial advancement; it is true of public betterments that have primarily an art value. The practical and the ornamental betterment are alike in this—that money wisely expended for good purposes is safely and profitably invested.

The limitations of expenditures for civic betterment are of course very obvious. The work undertaken must be good in itself and serve some good purpose. Money expended for a worthless filtration plant, for example, is money worse than wasted. Money spent for bad art is not always considered as so completely lost as money that might be wasted for worthless sanitary apparatus. The statue causes no ill health and may be avoided by passing down the next street, while an impure water supply brings death and destruction to many helpless persons.—Homes and Garden.

English and Scotch Precedence.

At the coronation of Charles I., the kingdoms of England and Scotland having been united during the reign of his father, considerable friction took place with regard to the order of precedence of the English and Scottish noblemen. An arrangement satisfactory to all parties was finally concluded, in virtue of which English peers while in England took precedence of Scottish peers of the same rank, while in Scotland this order was reversed, and the Scottish peers went first.

Against a Snap Judgment.

A boy in a Chicago school refused to sew, evidently considering it beneath the dignity of a ten-year-old man. "George Washington sewed," said the principal, taking it for granted that a soldier must, "and do you consider yourself better than George Washington?" "I don't know. Time will tell," said he seriously.—Popular Education.

Man never fastened one end of a chain around the neck of his brother that God did not fasten the other end round the neck of the oppressor.—Lamartine.

Installments.

Bacon—Did you ever get anything on the installment system? Egbert—Yes; I got my household that way. First I got my wife, then her father and mother and now I'm getting her brothers and sisters.

Going to Sleep.

"If you have never done so, watch yourself go to sleep," said a physician, "and you will be amazed to see how tense your position is. Your knees are drawn and bended, your back is curved, the arms are held more or less tightly to the body and the fingers are folded. The eyelids are held shut, not allowed to droop over the eyes, the neck is strained and the head seems to touch the pillow only at the temples. The points of contact with the bed are really at the temples, shoulders, hips, knees and ankles. Now look at a child sleeping. Every muscle is relaxed, every joint is inert and prone on the couch; his little frame finds rest at every point. The features are undone, so to speak, the nose widens, the mouth droops, the eyelids close easily, and with every line of expression obliterated he finds utter and complete repose. The abandon makes him fall out of bed sometimes, such an inert body has he become. You may imitate him even to that degree, if necessary. Begin at your toes to relax, loosen all your joints and muscles, unbend your fingers, shake your wrists loose, take the curve and strain out of your neck, go all in pieces, in fact, and see how the day's fatigue seems to slip off from you, and the gentle mantle of rest and oblivion to infold you like a garment."

Illustrating the Text.

In his book on India, "The Highroad of Empire," Mr. Murray enlivens a description of the carts of that country with a story of a fellow Englishman who had traveled in the east. He was a Kentish squire who was interested in giving his tenants an intelligent idea of what he had seen abroad. He had made a journey in Palestine and, being an admirable draftsman, had brought home a number of excellent sketches. One winter evening after his return the squire gave a lecture to his village and showed a number of his drawings. Among them was a cart very similar to that which I drew at Jodhpur. The squire explained to his audience that it was a type of the most primitive conveyances known and that it had existed in precisely this same form in Palestine from the earliest times—indeed, that it was probably a cart or wagon of this description that Joseph had sent down from Egypt to bring his father and his household goods from Canaan. Afterward an old farmer came up and expressed his great interest in what he had heard, adding that there was one thing above all others which had interested him, and that was the cart, "for now," he said, "I understand why Joseph said to his brethren, 'See that ye fall not out by the way.'"

CAN'T BE SEPARATED,

Some Bellefonte People Have Learned How To Get Rid of Both.

Backache and kidney ache are twin brothers.

You can't separate them.

And you can't get rid of the backache until you cure kidney ache.

If the kidneys are well and strong the rest of the system is pretty sure to be in vigorous health.

Doan's Kidney pills make strong, healthy kidneys.

Mrs. Nancy Davis, of 246 East Logan Street, says: "I suffered a bad fall some years ago when living in Rochester. I thought at first that I had broken my back. I was unable to get up without assistance and from that time I suffered for years with a weak back and excruciating pains through the loins and through the small of my back. Sometimes I was completely prostrated and helpless. Doctors and medicines failed to help me and the pain continued until I got Doan's Kidney pills. I took only a few doses before I began to feel better and when I had continued using them for a while I was thoroughly cured. My back regained its strength and the pain left me. I have had no return of the trouble since."

DEDICATED FREE OF DEBT!

The Christian Science Temple at Boston, Mass.

TOTAL COST $2,000,000

Dedicated to Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, the Founder of Christian Science —The Growth of this Religious Denomination.

FIRST CHURCH WAS STARTED IN BOSTON

Boston, Mass., June 10.—The dedication Sunday of a magnificent new addition to the Mother Church of the Christian Science denomination, in Boston, is an event of the highest significance in the history of this religious body. The interest of all Christian Scientists is centred on Boston and thousands from all parts of the world are thronging the historic old city. The regular communion of the Christian Science church always brings a multitude of its adherents to Boston, but the dedication of the new structure this year has made the attendance unusually large.

Built as the result of a spontaneous recognition of Mrs. Eddy's life work and of the imperative demands of the marvelous growth of the movement, expressing the liberality of thousands of Christian Scientists, and embodying the best in architectural design and modern construction, this new building is logically the central feature of this year's gathering, although Christian Scientists say that they lay greater stress upon the spiritual awakening which has inspired the generous liberality expressed.

The church is one of the largest, if not the largest, in the United States, its seating capacity being 5,012. Its style of architecture is Italian renaissance. The pews and other interior woodwork finishings are of mahogany. The walls are Concord granite and Bedford stone, with beautiful decorative carvings. The inside finish is a soft gray to harmonize with the Bedford stone columns supporting the dome. The height of the building to the top of the lantern is 224 feet, just one foot higher than Bunker Hill monument. The dome is eighty-two feet in diameter and is covered with terra cotta to match the Bedford stone. The building presents a stately, dignified and impressive appearance, and it is already recognized as one of the landmarks of Boston.

The first floor contains the various offices, a large foyer, Sunday school room, cloak rooms, etc. There are twelve exits and seven staircases. The cost of the building is something less than $2,000,000. The new chimes consist of eleven bells made by the Meneely Bell company, of Troy, N. Y. The largest bell, which is c sharp, weighs 4,000 pounds. The smallest bell weighs 400 pounds. The organ is necessarily one of the largest in the world. It is strictly up-to-date and contains all modern appliances.

The first church organization of Christian Scientists was formed in Boston in 1879 with twenty-six members. So slow was the growth of the movement at first that in 1889, ten years later, there were only eleven churches. From that time, however, the growth was more rapid. In 1899 there were 301 churches. At the present time, 1906, there are 657 churches making 932 societies holding church services.

FIGHTING FISH.

Peculiar Animals That Are Found Only In Siamese Waters.

A favorite recreation in Siam is watching the fighting fish, a species of fish found in the waters of no other country. The fish cannot live in unity, and if two are placed in a bowl they will instantly engage in a struggle "to the death."

It is no unusual thing to see in the streets of Siam crowds of natives chattering and gesticulating around a bowl containing a number of these fish, which they bet on in the same way as more civilized people do on race horses. Intense excitement reigns among the natives as they watch the fish fighting within the bowl.

These peculiarly quarrelsome fish are very similar to the common pike in appearance, with the exception that they are not in the possession of gills. Their fins, too, are remarkably sharp, and these they use with terrible effect upon one another. Blood oozes from their sides, and yet they persist in fighting until perhaps only two are left alive, and then the survivors turn on one another until only one is left out of perhaps a dozen placed in the tub.

Although the fighting fish are exceptionally good to eat, the majority of natives esteem them only for their fighting propensities, which affords them amusement and excitement every day.

London's Last Public Hanging.

The grewsome spectacle of a public execution in England is happily a thing of the past. The scaffold used to be erected in the roadway outside the prison, and crowds would assemble to witness the sight, the last time a man was hanged in public being when Michael Barrett suffered the extreme penalty in May, 1868, in Old Bailey, outside Newgate prison, for exploding a cask of gunpowder under the walls of Clerkenwell prison to release the Fenian prisoners Burke and Casey, a mad act that killed several and injured still more.—London Graphic.

Lunatics Used as Horses.

A regular slave mart still exists in many country districts of Finland. Once a year such paupers, lunatics and aged people of each parish as cannot support themselves are put up at public auction and consigned to those farmers or families who will board them at the lowest price offered by the parish authorities. The helpless creatures are made to work as much as possible by their owners, who have the right to chastise them and are generally most inhuman in their treatment. Lunatics have been used even as cart horses.

If it really were known how many Bellefonte residents have been cured of stomach troubles and digestion by Dr. Davis' Prescription, it might perhaps surprise you, but what is more surprising is the fact that any one will continue to suffer with heart burn, sour stomach, water brash, sick headache, mental depression, nausea, and other distressing symptoms of dyspepsia when there is a remedy of such great merit that it almost invariably benefits every one that tries it. Pepsicola Tablets are the prescription of Dr. Davis, a physician who devoted a lifetime to the study of stomach trouble, and, if your food does not agree with you, if you are tired, nervous, worn out, low spirited and your energy at low par, it may interest you to know that no other prescription in this world has a greater record of cures behind it, and there is nothing more certain to give you relief. Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition, brain power and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. EDITORIAL.

THE WORK AT HARRISBURG.

The work of the Republican state convention is now a part of history —its declarations are on record and its candidates are before the people for their consideration. To one not biased by partisan prejudice or local feeling the candidates bear every semblance of invincibility and ought to sweep the state by an overwhelming majority. While it is admitted that Philadelphia was not entitled to the Gubernatorial nomination this time, the present Govenor coming from that city ,the claim of political expediency will undoubtedly go a great way towards appeasing those who so manfully stood up for the interests of their respective localities and urged the nomination of a candidate from one of the interior counties. The convention saw fit to disregard the arguments so strenuously advanced by the "country" as against the "city," and nominated Mr Stuart on the first ballot.

As to the wisdom of this result it may be said that the leaders of the party from every section of the state held their conferences, discussed every phase of the situation and were appartely fully satisfied in the end that it would be for the best interests of all to meet existing conditions in a manner that would insure certain results. Of course it is almost an impossbility for a great convention to do its work to the exact liking of every section, especially when so many are clamoring for personal recognition and demand respect for what they contend as their rights.

The Democratic oppositiou will endeavor to stir up strife among the Republicans with their time worn cry of bossism, but in this case it is evident that if the convention was bossed it proved to be its own boss-by the manifest exercise of its own free will. A large majority of the delegates went to Harrisburg uninstructed, and they voted as they considered to be just and right in hearty accord with their duty to the party that elected them.

If, as it has been claimed, the action of the convention will insure the withdrawal of the Lincolnite ticket, there will be nothing to prevent harmonious and united co-operation among all the Republican forces of the state. This will leave the party to combat the Democracy and its Prohibition ally, and in that event the result will be decidely one-sided in favor of the Republican party. It remains to be seen whether the Lincolnites will or not prove their faith in Republican principles and pursue the course that their own leaders declared they would pursue. It is plain that that have nothing to gain by any other line of action, for the ticket as nominated last week will undoubtedly win at the polls.

It will be triumphant because it stands for the great Republican policy, for President Roosevelt, for prosperity and advancement. In this year of grace, no ticket representing anything else, can hope to succeed at the polls.

The Republican candidates themselves, are beyond criticism. They are clean, sound and statesmanlike, and the platform on which they stand will appeal to the good sense and the good judgement of all intelligent people.

OLD ROMAN NAMES.

The Peculiar System That Was In Use by the Nobility.

The noble Romans were peculiar in their system of nomenclature. They had the praenomen, the nomen and the cognomen. The first of these distinguished the individual and was equivalent to our Christian or baptismal name. It was usually indicated by a single letter, as A. for Aulus, or by two letters, as Ap. for Appius, or three, as Ser. for Servius. The nomen was distinctive of the gens or clan and has no corresponding appellative among us. The cognomen was placed last and designated the familiae, precisely answering to our surname. Sometimes a fourth name was added, the agnomen, in consequence of a renowned action, some conspicuous event of life or feature of character. Scipio, in addition to his regular names, was styled Africanus after his conquest of Carthage. The name Germanicus was assumed by those who distinguished themselves in the wars with the Germans.

In female names the Romans indulged but small variety of appellation, and fancy had little or nothing to do with their invention and bestowal. When there was but one daughter in a family she received the feminine termination of her gentile name, as Tullia, the daughter of Marcus Tullius Cicero, and Octaviae, the sister of Octavius Caesar, etc., which names were retained even after marriage. When there were two daughters one was called Major and the other Minor, as Cornelia Major and Cornelia Minor. If there were more than two they were distinguished by their number, thus: Prima, Secunda, Tertia, Quarta, etc.

GREEK COINS.

How the Ancients Tested the Purity of the Metal.

The first coins of gold and silver that have come down to us are now dated as a rule in the time of Croesus, who lived about the middle of the sixth century B. C.

It may readily be imagined that a mere lump of gold, supposed to be of a certain weight, would be subject to skepticism unless it were guaranteed by some recognized authority. So, in order to save reweighing and testing at each transaction, these ingots or coins were stamped with the authoritative mark of a prince or state. So stamped they become the true coins in spite of the fact that, contrary to modern custom, they were not at all regular.

But, in spite of the guarantee that might be afforded by the mark of a state or a prince, we find the Greeks applying certain tests to determine the genuineness of the currency offered to them. Plating was easily detected by jabbing the suspected coin with some sharp instrument. At other times the touchstone was used. One which was known as the "Lydian stone" was supposed to reveal a proportion of foreign metal as small as a barley corn in a stater. Another test, in the case of silver, was to polish the coin and then breathe on it. If the moisture quickly disappeared the metal was pure. Yet another way to detect alloy was to heat the coin or coins on redhot iron. If the metal was unalloyed it remained bright, if mixed with other substances it turned black or red according as it was more or less impure.—Oliver S. Tonks in Chautauquan.

Daffodil and Asphodel.

Daffodil and asphodel—the latter, according to Homer, covered the meadow haunted by the shades of departed heroes—are etymologically the same. Old time Englishmen confused the two plants, which are quite different, and it was reserved for later generations to restore its true spelling to the true asphodel and restrict daffodil, with its mysterious "d," to the flower now known by that name. Formerly it was "affodille," and the "d" is variously explained as being a childish insertion, like the "T" in Ted, from Edward, or as representing the French "fleur d'affrodille" or the English "th' affrodile" (the definite article) or as the final "d" of "and" in such a combination as "fennell and affodil."

PENGUINS FEEDING.

The Change That Takes Place When They Enter the Water.

The appearance of the keeper of the penguins at the zoo, with his pail of live gudgeon, is the signal for sudden and intense excitement in the cages. The penguins wave their little flippers and waddle to the door, whence they peer eagerly down the wooden steps leading to the pool. The cormorant croaks and sways from side to side, and the darters poise their snaky heads and spread their batlike wings. At the water's edge the penguins do not launch themselves upon the surface like other water fowl, but instantly plunge beneath.

Once below water an astounding change takes place. The slow, ungainly bird is transferred into a swift and brilliant creature, beaded with globules of quicksilver, where the air clings to the close feathers, and flying through the clear and waveless depths with arrowy speed and powers of turning far greater than in any known form of aerial flight. The rapid and steady strokes of the wings are exactly similar to those of the air birds, while its feet float straight out level with the body, unused for propulsion or even as rudders and as little needed in its progress as those of a wild duck when on the wing.

The twists and turns necessary to follow the active little fish are made wholly by the strokes of one wing and the cessation of movement in the other, and the fish are chased, caught and swallowed without the slightest relaxation of speed in a submarine flight which is quite as rapid as that of most birds which take their prey in midair. In less than two minutes some thirty gudgeon are caught and swallowed below water, the only appearance of the birds on the surface being made by one or two bounds from the depths, when the head and shoulders leap above the surface for a second and then disappear.

Any attempt to remain on the surface leads to ludicrous splashing and confusion, for the submarine bird cannot float. It can only fly below the surface. Immediately the meal is finished both penguins scramble out of the water and shuffle with round backs and drooping wings back to their cage to dry and digest.—London Spectator.

YOUTHFUL WARRIORS.

Pizarro completed the conquest of Peru at thirty-five and died at forty.

Cortez effected the conquest of Mexico and completed his military career before the age of thirty-six.

The great Conde defeated the Spaniards at Rocroi at twenty-two and won all his military fame before the age of twenty-five.

Peter the Great of Russia was proclaimed czar at ten years of age, organized a large army at twenty, won the victory at Embach at thirty, founded St. Petersburg at thirty-one and died at the age of fifty-five.

Napoleon was a major at twenty-four, general of brigade at twenty-five and commander in chief of the army of Italy at twenty-six. He achieved all his victories and was finally overthrown before the age of forty-one.

Frederick the Great ascended the throne at twenty-eight, terminated the first Silesian war at thirty and the second at thirty-three. Ten years later, with a population of but 5,000,000, he triumphed over a league of more than 100,000,000 people.

British Army Red Tape.

A letter of instruction said to have been sent to a British army officer, who reported that Private Blank had lost his greatcoat, runs as follows: "The calculation of the value of a lost greatcoat should be made by deducting the value when worn out from the value when new, as given in article 75, 1865, clothing warrant, dividing the remainder by the number of months the garment should wear, multiplying the quotiant by the number of months the garment has actually been worn and subtracting the sum thus obtained from the total value of the new greatcoat. The balance is the amount that should be charged."

A Sort of No Man's Land.

Australia's least known and least developed section is the northern territory. It is a sort of no man's land. Its capital, Palmerston, contains more Chinese than Caucasians and is the only place in greater Britain where the Mongolian is the master and the white man the servant. The climate is very trying to whites, and the aboriginal blacks are of a fierce and sanguinary disposition. Vast herds of buffalo, the descendants of a few experimentally liberated a century ago, roam over the plains, and the place will some day, it is believed, be a sportsman's paradise.

Dull Times.

"Just set it for 5 o'clock," said the young lawyer, who was purchasing an alarm clock. "I'll never want to change it."

"Do you always get up at that hour in the morning?" asked the clerk.

"Oh, no. That's the hour in the afternoon when I always close my office and go home."—Philadelphia Press.

Talking.

Wife—You were talking in your sleep again last night, dear. Why do you persist in doing it? Husband—Good gracious, Maria, a man ought to be allowed to talk sometimes, oughtn't he?—Bohemian.

Suited Him.

His Wife—Yes, the girl is going to leave. She is lazy and good for nothing anyhow. The Professor—Why, I thought she was a model servant. She never attempted to arrange my papers.—Brooklyn Life.

A LUCKY ESCAPE.

Quick Wit and Daring Ruse of a Russian Revolutionist.

Nowhere outside of the pages of fiction would we expect such an incident as the following from the personal story of the Russian revolutionist Narodny. Narodny had just jumped from a window to escape the police. "When I scrambled to my feet I discovered myself in the yard and among half a dozen soldiers. I was without overcoat and hat—a very suspicious figure—and, having neither, I could not escape even could I get by the soldiers who surrounded me," he said.

"I jerked a card from my pocket—to this day I do not know what it was—and handed it to one of the soldiers. 'Here is my card,' I said rapidly. 'I am a member of the secret police. One of these revolutionists is trying to escape. I am after him. Quick! Give me your coat and hat!'

"He automatically obeyed. I slipped on his coat and hat and to all appearances was a soldier of the czar. I walked past the guarded gate of the yard, out into the street. Before me were thousands of soldiers. I saw my friends being brought down from the hall and put into the black vans, about which stood guards of Cossacks. I marched through my friends (all of that group are in prison today save only myself and the friend who escaped with me) with the air of a soldier on a very important message and pressed on through the mass of other soldiers that filled the street."—American Magazine.

BARBER SURGEONS.

When the Razor and the Scalpel Were Linked In One Trade.

More than 400 years old is the Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh. At the time it was founded the surgeons and barbers of the city were united as one of the fourteen incorporated trades of Edinburgh. On July 1, 1505, they received their charter from the town council. The charter of the barber surgeons was confirmed by James IV., an early Stuart king of great enlightenment and accomplishment, who took much interest in the progress of the surgeons on account of the needs of his army in time of war.

In the charter leave was given to the incorporation to control the medical education of the city, such as it was in those days; of bloodletting, to have the sole right of practice and to put down quacks. They were to get every year the body of a criminal who had been executed to practice anatomy on, and they promised in return to do "suffrage for his soul." Of the first 158 members of the incorporation six were surgeons to the kings of Scotland.

As society improved and medical science developed the gulf between the surgeons and barbers widened, and in 1772, as the result of a process in the court of session, the connection was finally terminated. The deacon, or president, of the incorporation of surgeons was for more than 320 years a member of the town council of Edinburgh, ex officio, and several of the deacons were members of the Scottish parliament.

Brothers and Sisters.

It has been proved again and again that a boy without a sister is much to be pitied; that a girl without a brother is to be condoled with. And why? Because the mutual society improves both. The boy teaches the girl to be wider minded, less petty and narrow, more manly physically, and, above all, to understand something of the opposite sex. Again, the boy is a hundredfold wicer for having a sister. He confides his little scrapes to her, and she, with her gentle inborn goodness, helps him and advises him to avoid the pitfall again.—London Queen.

Solitude.

Solitude is a matter of taste. It has been the subject of much discussion. Volumes have been written in praise or condemnation of it. But perhaps the real value of solitude has never been so subtly and so accurately expressed as by the girl who was asked if she liked being alone. "That depends," she answered sweetly, "on whom I am alone with."

Earthquake Gowns.

In 1750 there was a great earthquake in England, and Horace Walpole records that "several women have made 'earthquake gowns'—that is, warm gowns to sit out of doors all night." Walpole also tells that "Turner, a great china man at the corner of the next street had a jar cracked by the shock. He originally asked 10 guineas for the jar. He now asks 20, because it is the only jar in Europe that had been cracked by an earthquake."

Mended It.

"I have never given you credit for knowing very much, madam," said a blunt old bachelor, "but"—

"Sir!" she interrupted. "Do you wish to insult"—

"But," he continued, "I have always admired your grace and beauty."

"I accept your apology," said the lady.

Pertinent Query.

"So he no longer calls his pretty little home 'The Nutshell?' Why did he change it?"

"He got tired of having passing humorists ring his bell to ask if the kernel was in."

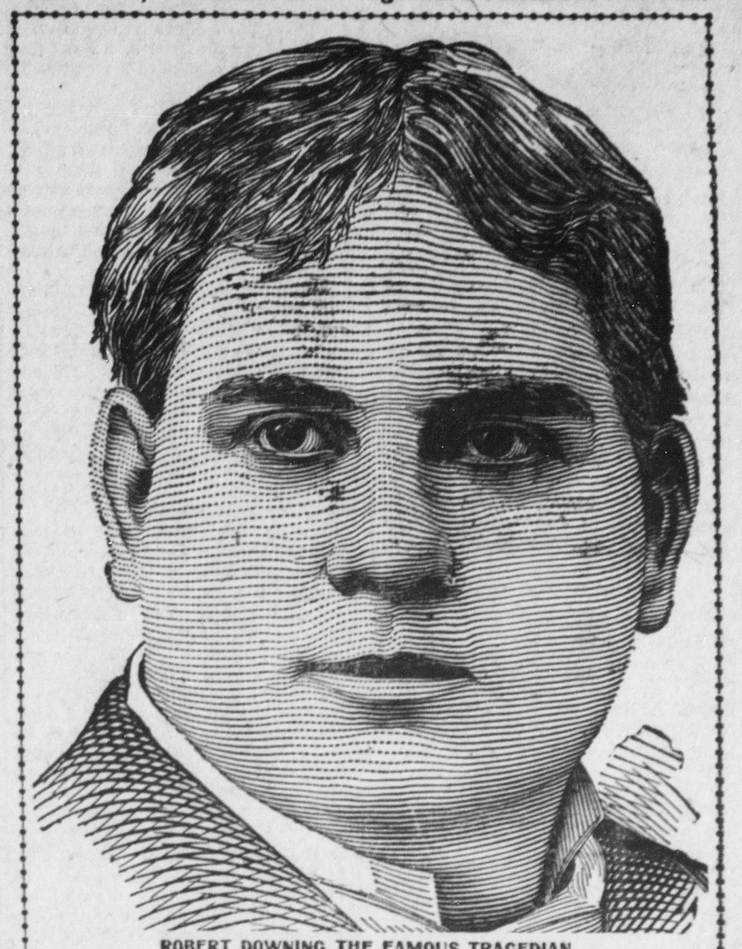
Consolation.

"Well, I'll die game, anyway," remarked the sparrow as he was shot by mistake for a reedbird.

Half the truth will very often amount to absolute falsehood.—Whately.

SYSTEMIC CATARRH SO LITTLE UNDERSTOOD

Claims Many Thousands. A Tragedian's Thanks to Pe-ru-na.



ROBERT DOWNING, THE FAMOUS TRAGEDIAN.

In speaking of Peruna, Robert Downing, the famous tragedian, says:

"You may notice that persons in poor health always find the heat most intolerable; this I avoid by using Peruna. I know by the thermometer that the weather is hot, yet I have felt the heat less this summer than ever.

"I find Peruna a preventative against all sudden summer ills that swoop upon one in changing climates and water. It is the finest traveling companion and safeguard against malarial influences.

"The cooling action of Peruna on the mucous membrane makes it invaluable to actors and singers, as it does away with that tendency to sudden hoarseness so apt to overtake one on emerging from a hot dressing room to a draughty stage.

"To sum it up Peruna has done me more good than any tonic I have ever taken."—Robert Downing.

Dr. Hartman was the first physician in the United States to accurately describe systemic catarrh. His remedy, Peruna, the only systemic catarrh remedy yet devised, is now known all over the civilized world.

FIGHTING FISH.

Peculiar Animals That Are Found Only In Siamese Waters.

A favorite recreation in Siam is watching the fighting fish, a species of fish found in the waters of no other country. The fish cannot live in unity, and if two are placed in a bowl they will instantly engage in a struggle "to the death."

It is no unusual thing to see in the streets of Siam crowds of natives chattering and gesticulating around a bowl containing a number of these fish, which they bet on in the same way as more civilized people do on race horses. Intense excitement reigns among the natives as they watch the fish fighting within the bowl.

These peculiarly quarrelsome fish are very similar to the common pike in appearance, with the exception that they are not in the possession of gills. Their fins, too, are remarkably sharp, and these they use with terrible effect upon one another. Blood oozes from their sides, and yet they persist in fighting until perhaps only two are left alive, and then the survivors turn on one another until only one is left out of perhaps a dozen placed in the tub.

Although the fighting fish are exceptionally good to eat, the majority of natives esteem them only for their fighting propensities, which affords them amusement and excitement every day.

London's Last Public Hanging.

The grewsome spectacle of a public execution in England is happily a thing of the past. The scaffold used to be erected in the roadway outside the prison, and crowds would assemble to witness the sight, the last time a man was hanged in public being when Michael Barrett suffered the extreme penalty in May, 1868, in Old Bailey, outside Newgate prison, for exploding a cask of gunpowder under the walls of Clerkenwell prison to release the Fenian prisoners Burke and Casey, a mad act that killed several and injured still more.—London Graphic.

Mrs. Rounder—Yes, and you still tell me the old, old story.

Mr. Rounder (in surprise)—When, dear?

Mrs. Rounder—When you start for the club.—Chicago News.

Modern Existence.

To dress better, live better and occupy better houses that are better furnished forces men to work harder and longer than their predecessors did. The result of this is that the ordinary man is separated from his wife and family almost as much as if he were absent.—Truth.

WITNESSES TO ALIBIS.

Shady Trade Which Once Flourished In New York's Courts.

The elder Weller in "Pickwick" was, as all admirers of the works of Dickens will know, a great believer in the utility of an alibi as a defense in both criminal and civil actions.

"Never mind the character," said Mr. Weller to his son. "Stick to the alleybi. Nothing like an alleybi, Sammy; nothing. Vereever he's agoin' to be tried, me boy, a alleybi's the thing to get him off."

This sage advice of Mr. Weller found frequent corroboration in the views of criminal lawyers in town up to a very few years ago. There were half a century ago more criminal lawyers than there are today, and the emoluments and fees of criminal lawyers were materially larger in the ordinary run of cases than now. As a consequence, cases were more often defended than they are now and pleas of guilty much more rarer. Then the alibi witness was a necessary though usually unwelcome part of the machinery of defense in criminal cases. There is in criminal procedure no better defense than an alibi if sustained. Alibi witnesses were therefore very much in demand until juries began to mistrust them and the penalties for the crime of perjury were visited upon some of the delinquents.

For a long time the mendacious and subsidized testimony of professional alibi witnesses obtained credence from jurors, and some of these witnesses, to quote their own language, "made a good thing out of it." Juries in criminal cases are usually sympathetic where no outside pressure is brought upon them, and it is the part of the charge of every judge in a criminal case to inform the jury that the prisoner at the bar is entitled to every reasonable doubt. If, therefore, any uncertainty existed on the point whether or not the prisoner was actually present at the time and place of the alleged crime he was entitled to the benefit of it, but little by little the prosecuting officers became acquainted with the identity and records of the professional alibi witnesses. One or two were prosecuted. Others were scared off. The commercial value of the services of the others was decreased, and finally the whole nefarious business was abandoned, never since to be revived.

Elevators and False Teeth.

In department stores where express elevators run to roof garden restaurants some gentle passengers experience daily discomfort because of the sudden movement of the car. The proud owner of a fine set of artificial teeth remarked to her companion a few days ago: "This is the most severe test of proper fit of teeth that I know of. Mine are supposed to be correct in every respect. Still, I never travel in an elevator running express that I'm not in constant fear of my teeth taking a fall. If you close the mouth your breath will be taken away."—New York Press.

Water In Rubber.

Experiments with a hermetically sealed rubber bottle containing water have shown that the rubber is not absolutely water tight. The filled bottle weighed seventeen ounces four drams. At the end of one year the weight was seventeen ounces two drams; nine years, ten ounces; eighteen years, fourteen ounces two drams; twenty-three years, thirteen ounces four drams; twenty-five years, seven ounces eight drams; twenty-eight years, three ounces fourteen drams; thirty years, three ounces twelve drams, the water being entirely gone.

JAMES R. HUGHES.

"THE SONG OF THE SHIRT."

It Proved the Most Popular Thing Hood Ever Wrote.

During his last illness Tom Hood in an idle moment made an imaginative sketch of his own tombstone. He drew himself reclining at full length on a slab of stone, on the edge of which in large capitals he wrote, "He Sang the 'Song of the Shirt.'" This was the only inscription, and, as he himself has said, Tom Hood needs no other.

How much he felt and prided himself upon the song by which he became known and loved by millions is shown by this and the following fact: "If I were embalmed these are the arms I should adopt," said he one day, showing a rough vignette to a friend. The sketch contained a very beautiful and pathetic idea. It represented a heart pierced by a needle threaded with silver tears, and beneath was the motto he had inscribed on the imaginary tombstone.

"The Song of the Shirt" appeared in the Christmas number of the fifth volume of Punch. It was unsigned, but every paper in the land quoted it, and it speedily became the talk of the day. Hood himself did not think it very remarkable, but Mrs. Hood had said to him as she folded it for press: "Now, mind, Hood, mark my words, this will tell wonderfully. It is one of the best things you ever did."

Mrs. Hood was right. The song was translated into French, German and Italian. It was printed on cheap cotton handkerchiefs and parodied times without number.

THE FIRST MONEY.

It Is Credited to the Lydians of Asia Minor.

It is difficult to realize that prior to B. C. 700 there were no true coins, that ingots or buttons of gold and silver were weighed at every mercantile transaction. The Lydians of Asia Minor are credited with having been the first to cast and stamp with an official device small oval gold ingots of definite fixed weight, an invention strangely delayed, but of inestimable importance to industry and commerce. A coin has been described as "a piece of metal of fixed weight, stamped by authority of government and employed as a medium of exchange." Medals, though struck by authority, are only historical records and have no currency value.

The bright, far flashing intellect of Greece saw the import of the Lydian invention and adopted it quickly, and every Greek state, nearly every city, island and colony, established a mint, generally at some one of the great temples, for all early coin types are religious in character. They bear symbols of some god as a pledge of good faith. The offerings, tithes and rents of the worshipers were coined and circulated as money. Temples thus became both mints and banks. Our word "money" is said to have been derived from the Roman shrine of Juno, Moneta, the earliest Latin mint.

The first shape of these early coins was that of an enlarged coffee berry, punched on the rounded side with official letters or sinkings, as they are called.

Earth Curvature and Vision.

One of the "seven wonders of the ancient world" was the Pharos, or light tower at Alexandria. If you have a popular account of that great structure handy, read it carefully and note that you are informed that the tower could be seen at a distance of from 100 to 150 miles. Let us see if this could possibly be true. The curvature of the globe is 6.99 inches to the mile. This being true, we find that an object 100 feet high can only be seen at a fraction over thirteen miles. Figuring on the basis of an earth curvature of even seven inches to the mile, we find that the light tower in question must have been over a mile in height if visible even at a distance of 100 miles.

Old Workmen.

An Englishman who is a large employer of labor has been investigating the arguments of those who say that a workingman under modern conditions becomes at an early age valueless. He has kept a record of all accidents that have incapacitated his men for three days and upward. The people engaged in his employment are from fifteen to sixty-five years of age, and he asserts that more accidents occur to men under thirty than to those over fifty. He says, "I would much rather intrust an exceptionally dangerous job to a man over fifty than to one of thirty years of age."

Drew His Picture.

It is told of Major General Sir William Gatacre of the British army that during the Sudan campaign he was one day going the round of the sentries. Stopping before one he asked him what his orders were. "To keep a sharp lookout for the enemy and also for General Gatacre," was the prompt reply. "Do you know him by sight?" asked the general. "No, sir," answered the man, "but I was told that if I saw an officer fussing and swearing and rushing about that would be General Gatacre."

The Same Idea.

It is recorded that Napoleon, when asked to summarize the art of war, answered briefly, "The art of war consists in being strongest at a given point at a given time." His answer was terse and true, but that born but untaught fighter, General Forrest, expressed the same idea, yet more briefly and forcefully. When the grim old Confederate was asked how to win in battle he replied, "Get there fust with the mostest men."

A WONDER OF JAPAN.

The Famous Castle of the Gold Dolphins at Nishma.

Is the novel castle at Nishma, Japan, the palace which Marco Polo described in his tale of the marvels of far Cathay as covered with gold slabs? All the ends of the ridge of the pyramidal structure are large solid gold dolphins. Beneath the palace is a well which is literally a sealed gold mine. It is cold lined and will hold sufficient water to supply 5,000 persons. The dolphins, which were placed on the top several centuries ago, have excited the curiosity of foreign relic hunters, as any one might imagine they would. So many have climbed to the top of the high structure to discover by testing if they are real gold that the dolphins have become seriously disfigured. Strong steel wire bags have been put over them to prevent further vandalism.

Only by good fortune does one of these dolphins still grace the old castle. A number of years ago it was taken down and sent to Vienna for exhibition at the world's fair held there as a rare specimen of ancient Japanese art. The vessel on which it was being returned sank, and it lay at the bottom of the sea for several years in spite of every attempt to raise it. Persistence was rewarded at last, for it was finally recovered and placed again in its old position.

The castle is used by the emperor of Japan as his headquarters during the army and navy reviews. State balls are also held there.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE WHALE'S SENSES.

Ability of the Ponderous Animal to Hear Under Water.

It seems perfectly evident that whales must hear when in the water, says the London Field. This inference is confirmed by the comparatively small development of the other sense organs. The eye, for instance, is very small and can be of little use even at the comparatively small depths to which whales are now believed to descend.

Again, the sense of smell, judging by the rudimentary conditions of the olfactory organs, must be in abeyance, and whales have no sense organs comparable to the lateral line system of fishes. Consequently it would seem that when below the surface of the water they must depend chiefly upon the sense of hearing. Probably this sense is so highly developed as to enable the animals in the midst of the vibrations made by the screwlike movements of the tail or flukes to distinguish the sound (or vibrations) made by the impact of the water against the rocks even in a dead calm, and, in the case of piscivorous species, to recognize by the pulse in the water the presence of shoal fish.

Failing in this explanation, it is difficult to imagine how whales can find their way about in the semidarkness and avoid collisions with rocks and rockbound coasts.

LAUGHTER.

Even If It Be Emotional Insanity, Let Us Have Plenty of It.

Some English scientist has reached the conclusion that laughter is insanity. He regards a fit of laughter as an emotional insanity of short duration. All right, then, give us a little more insanity. There is not laughter enough in the world—at least the right kind of laughter. We will let the Englishmen keep their faces straight if they want to, but it befits the American civilization better to break out into laughter once in awhile. Laughter is good for the facial muscles. It develops the muscles of the neck as well as the face. It makes the corners of the mouth turn upward instead of downward. It gives the wrinkles of the face a pleasing outline, quickens the action of the heart and gives new life to the nerve centers. Yes, we can afford to let the Englishman look wise and idiotic if he wants to. He can stare with fish eyed bigotry whenever a joke is perpetrated, never allowing a ripple of merriment to disturb the placidity of his countenance. He can do all these things that he wishes to, but let us go on laughing. This kind of insanity mixes very well with sanity and prosaic life. A little burst of emotional insanity breaks nicely the monotony of facts and figures.—Medical Talk.

A writer who once saw Lord Tennyson on the platform of a railway station says of him: "He would have been tall, but his shoulders seemed somewhat bent. His hair was long; so was his beard. He wore an ugly Inverness cape and a large slouch hat. He looked like a bandit in a melodrama, and I thought him some poor actor who had come out in some of the stage properties. He seemed so sad I felt quite sorry for him as I watched him walk up and down the platform."

Fiction.

Legitimately produced and truly inspirited, fiction interprets humanity, informs the understanding and quickens the affections. It reflects ourselves, warns us against social follies, adds rich specimens to our cabinet of characters, dramatizes life for the unimaginative, daguerreotypes it for the unobservant, multiplies experience for the isolated or inactive and cheers age, retirement and invalidism with an available and harmless solace.—Tuckerman.

The Watchword of Women.

Modesty is woman's watchword. What-e-[illegible] tens her delicate sense of modesty, frightens her. For this reason many a w[illegible] ...mits diseases of the delicate womanly organs to become aggravated because she cannot bring herself to submit to the ordeal of unpleasant questionings, offensive examinations, and obnoxious local treatments, which some physicians find necessary. Doubtless thousands of the women who have taken advantage of Dr. Pierce's offer of free consultation by letter, have been led to do so by the escape thus offered from a treatment repugnant to modesty. Any sick woman may write to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., in perfect confidence., all letters being treated as strictly sent in plain envelopes, with no advertising or other printing upon them. VANISHED TREASURES.

Masterpieces of Art That Are Lost to the World.

The "Venus de Milo," which has been in the Louvre for many years is, as all the world knows, an imperfect piece of sculpture, though it is the greatest treasure of its kind the world has ever seen. A great reward would be given the man who could find the missing parts. About 1878 the most important of them—the right arm—came to light in London and was proved by experts to be genuine. The owner, however, refused to part with it and concealed it for fear it would be stolen. Unfortunately he died without revealing its hiding place, so it is as much lost as ever.

A bronze drinking cup which was stolen from an Egyptian temple in 1739 and brought to Europe has miraculously disappeared. On it is engraved the whole history of the Pharaohs, and it could easily be sold for $100,000. In fact, the French government offered a reward of $14,000 for its discovery, but the famous cup has vanished, probably forever.

Another treasure which has vanished in as strange a way is the Marcella vase of the Dresden collection. This is the only piece missing from the famous Dresden Marcella collection, the value of which is said to be $75,000. It bears the cross arrows and the lion's head. Not long ago the vase was said to be in England, but, be that as it may, the person who rediscovers this treasure may command any price in reason for it.

How it is possible that a treasure so large as a painting could be lost sight of entirely is not easily explained, but this has often happened. One of Reynolds' paintings, "Countess of Derby," which is considered his best portrait, has disappeared. Not long after it was painted it disappeared from the collection of the Earl of Derby and has never been heard of since, though it would bring $150,000 to the finder. There are also two Vandykes and a Rembrandt missing, for which collectors are willing to pay $200,000. The Earl of Crewe would give a large sum for the return of a Cupid which some vandal cut from the portrait of the former Countess of Crewe and her son, who was painted as the sprite.—St. Louis Republic.

THE STAGE KISS.

It Tests the Genius of the Actor and the Actress.

The stage kiss is important. There is nothing which so tests the genius of an actor and an actress as the ability under just such circumstances to produce the illusion of love. On the stage it is necessary for them to forget their own personalities, to smother their own feelings, one for the other, and in the place of the warped though genuine kiss we see at the railroad station and the steamship wharf present to our eyes by the magic of their acting a highly artificial product.

And this highly artificial product, because it is art and because it is produced by art, impresses us as real and genuine where the actually real and genuine would have filled us only with derision and contempt, just as real tears on the stage would fail to move us. Indeed, the best stage kisses, the kisses that are most convincing in the way of realism, are usually given and received by actors and actresses whose feelings for each other in private life is, to say the least, indifferent. Frequently, if audiences only knew, they watch lovemaking on the stage between men and women who are literally at daggers' points with each other.

I would not go so far as to say that such a state of feeling always contributes to good stage lovemaking and to realistic stage kissing, but I do know that it is an axiomatic truth, recognized by theatrical managers everywhere, not to engage playfolk lovers to enact similar roles in a drama if it is at all possible to get any one else.—Blanche Ring in "The Psychology of the Stage Kiss."

Legend and Reality.

Legend tells how Napoleon, while Moscow was in flames, found time to draw up a decree organizing the Theatre Francais. Alas, the story is not true. Napoleon was in Poland when he received the decree ready to be signed. He there signed it and sent it back to Paris, but in the margin wrote the following: "To be forwarded when the army will be at Moscow. It is his majesty's intention that the decree should be dated from that town."

Obedience.

Every duty, even the least duty, involves the whole principle of obedience. And little duties make the will dutiful—that is, supple and prompt to obey. Little obediences lead into great. The daily round of duty is full of probation and of discipline. It trains the will, heart and conscience.—Woman's Life.

THE LUNACY OF LOVE.

Bulwer Lytton's Letters to His Own "Adored Poodle."

To Miss Louise Devey, the former friend and the executrix of Lady Lytton, had been confided a packet of 298 letters, representing the correspondence of Bulwer Lytton with Miss Wheeler in the days of their early courtship. Miss Devey published these with a preface, stating that she took this action in order to vindicate the memory of her dead friend. In what manner the letters could be regarded as a vindication it is difficult to see, though they serve as a remarkable contribution to the literature of epistolary lovemaking. The extravagant absurdity of some of them is almost beyond belief, and two passages may be quoted as illustrative of many others. In the letters Bulwer Lytton addresses Miss Wheeler as "Poodle" and signs himself "Puppy" or "Puppo."

"My Adored Poodle: Many, many thanks for oo darling letter. Me is so happy, me is wagging my tail and putting my ears down. Me is to meet oo tomorrow. O day of days! I cannot tell you how very, very happy you have made me! No, my own love, don't come before 12; but really I shall meet you! Oh, darling of darlings * * * O zoo love of loves, me is ready to leap out of my skin for joy! Adieu. Twenty million kisses.

"And so they dressed my poodle in white and black? O zoo darling! How like a poodle! And had oo oo's bootiful ears curled nicely, and did oo not look too pretty, and did not all the puppy dogs run after oo and tell oo what a darling oo was? Ah! Me sends oo 9,000,000 kisses to be distributed as follows: 500,000 for oo bootiful mouth, 250,000 to oo right eye, 250,000 to oo left eye, 1,000,000 to oo dear neck and the rest to be equally divided between oo arms and hands.

"Ten million more kisses, my own darling, for your letter which is just arrived. It is read, and now before it is answered take the following (marks of kisses). Pray, darling, shall we not kiss prettily tomorrow, darling (d) (a) (r) (l) (i) (n) (g)?

"Adieu, my own Rose, my life of life, very poodle of very poodles, adieu!

"Adieu, oo own idolatrous puppy.

"Ever my dearest, dearest, dearest, fondest, kindest, bootifulest, darlingest, angelest poodle. Oo own puppy."—Lyndon Orr in Bookman.

Chickens In the Rain.

On a rainy morning a good deal of wisdom may be learned from the chickens. If it is to be a soggy, rainy, drizzly day all day, the chickens will get out and stand about in the rain with an utterly indifferent manner. They look just as human beings feel, and they keep it up all day. But if the rain is to continue but a few hours the chickens will stay under shelter. They cannot be kept out. They hurry under cover when disturbed and stay there till the fair weather comes, which it does presently. And then they go out and enjoy the sunshine. The chickens know.

Quaint Customs In Abyssinia.

Quaint customs prevail in parts of Abyssinia. When a father is getting on in years the son bids him climb into a tree and jump down from the branches. If the old man staggers on landing the son spears him on the spot—his usefulness is over. One tribe had a custom of sewing chance visitors up in green hides and leaving them to be killed by the contraction of the skins. With another the only orthodox way of dealing with strangers was to tie them in a bundle and roll them over a precipice.—London Mail.

Just Quit Worrying.

Nobody knows what produces earthquakes, although it is often claimed that they do. The earth quakes somewhere every day. Nobody knows when the earth came or when it will go, where it came from, how it came or how it happened to be here. The fact is, when you get down to the truth, nobody knows anything about anything—past, present or to come—and about the only way to get along in this know-nothing world is not to try to know very much.—Eldorado Republican.

Indigestion.

The following cure for indigestion is recommended by the eminent Dr. Bond in the London Lancet, a medical journal of world wide repute.

"The indigestion must be a very hopeless one," says Dr. Bond, "which will not yield to a diet of a small cup of warm milk to which a teaspoonful of rum has been added, followed by a plain biscuit or two and some very mild cheese, paradoxical as this combination may seem."

According to Dr. Bond, there is a subtle harmony between these ingredients that does the business.

WOMEN HOTEL CLERKS.

How Those In Europe Impressed a Woman Traveler.

In most European hotels in the smaller places the visitor is met at the desk by a woman instead of by the perfunctory clerk so familiar to Americans at home. I think this is because a woman can be more successful in the art of common, everyday robbery. One doesn't like to argue about the prices with a sweet, smiling little lady, who seems to be exerting herself to an extreme degree to secure one's comfort and happiness, but if one happens to be making short stops here and there it is wise to put away suavity for the time being to the extent at least of an occasional mild protestation.

When madame smiles benignly and tells you that the room you have chosen, with everything included, will be 20 francs a day it is well to remember that "everything included" doesn't include everything by any means. There are a hundred and one little "extras," like tea, after dinner coffee, coffee and rolls in your room in the morning and such like luxuries, to say nothing of service, which must be paid for first hand if it is to be enjoyed at all. So at 20 francs madame is probably taking chances against a protest and will be enormously pleased with herself if none is forthcoming. It is the same all up and down the scale of prices, but I suppose those who can afford to go up the scale never care particularly.—Eleanor Franklin in Leslie's Weekly.

SOURCE OF SHELLAC.

The East India Insects That Produce the Resinous Substance.

India is the home of the Coccus lacca, the insects that produce the resinous substance known as shellac. The females puncture the twigs of several different kinds of trees, among them the bo, the bihar and the butea, and the twigs become incrusted with a hard, nearly transparent, reddish, resinous substance that serves the double purpose of protecting the eggs and finally furnishing food for the young insects. The incrusted twigs are broken from the trees before the young insects escape and are thoroughly dried in the sun. These dried twigs are called "stick-lac," and from them shellac and a dye analogous to cochineal are prepared. "Seed-lac" is the resinous concretion separated from the twigs, coarsely pounded and triturated with water in a mortar, by which nearly all of the coloring matter is removed.

To prepare shellac the seed-lac is put into oblong cotton cloth bags and warmed over a charcoal fire. When the rosin begins to melt the bags are twisted, and the pure, clear rosin is allowed to flow over fig wood planks or the smooth stems of the banyan tree and cools in the thin plates or shells which constitute shellac.

Pure shellac is very valuable. It is much harder than colophony and is easily soluble in alcohol.

"Will [illegible]."

Mr. Rounder (tenderly)—Do you remember, dear, during our courting days how I used to tell you the "old, old story?"

Mrs. Rounder—Yes, and you still tell me the old, old story.

Mr. Rounder (in surprise)—When, dear?

Mrs. Rounder—When you start for the club.—Chicago News.

Modern Existence.

To dress better, live better and occupy better houses that are better furnished forces men to work harder and longer than their predecessors did. The result of this is that the ordinary man is separated from his wife and family almost as much as if he were absent.—Truth.

A Mistaken Diagnosis.

In the boom days of Wichita one of the characters of the city was a lawyer, big paunched, big voiced, big necked and given to making political speeches.

He had a nasty way of talking about other people. One night while he was haranguing in the street one of the men whom he had attacked several times got excited, drew a knife and stabbed the orator.

He fell to the street, writhing and shouting: "I'm killed! I'm killed!"

They took him into a billiard room and laid him out on a billiard table. Word got to the newspaper offices, and the reporters came hurrying down.

The lawyer was stretched on the billiard table delivering his last speech, he said. In the middle of an impressive paragraph he saw the reporters.

He raised himself and bellowed, "Draw nigh, draw nigh, ye hounds of the press, and see a R-o-man die!"

And then the doctor came and found the knife had penetrated him about a sixteenth of an inch.—Saturday Evening Post.

Marshall Field's Advice.

A young bond salesman for a New York house interviewed Marshall Field in the spring of 1905 with a view to selling him a number of Pennsylvania railroad guaranteed bonds, yielding a little less than 4 per cent. "Young man," said Mr. Field, "you are only wasting my time and yours. I like your bonds. When the trustees of my estate come to investing the interest on my investment I hope they will buy that kind of bonds, but I am a business man and do not care to put a large part of my surplus in a fully developed property any more than I should care to buy out a business enterprise that seemed to me to have reached the limit of its growth, no matter how solid it might be. Your bonds are too good for me." Mr. Field, it will be noted, invested his surplus on the same principle upon which he built up his business—namely, to put the money where it has a chance to grow.—World's Work.

A Wrong Idea

Many people have the idea that a modern bath room is a luxury to be enjoyed only by the wealthy, you will be astonished if you take the trouble to call on us how reasonable such comforts are to be had, now-a-days, we furnish such information cheerfully—Archibald Allison.

The "Bere" of 1542.

It is curious to find in a "Dyetary" of 1542 the information that "bere is made of malte, of hopps and water. It is a naturall drynke for a Dutcheman. And now of late dayes it is moche used in Englande to the detryment of many Englisshe men." The author was speaking of "beer," the then new liquor distinguished from "ale" by being hopped. In this sense a seventeenth century rhymer says that "turkey, carps, hops, piccadel and beer came into England all in one year," "piccadel" being a kind of ruff or collar.

SUBMARINE REEFS.

How They Are Located by the Naval Engineers.

Prior to the nineteenth century navigation, except on the high seas, was mainly that of the Irish pilot who claimed to know all the rocks in the harbor. "An' there's wan of thim!" said he as he struck.

On approaching land one needs to know how far he is from the lighthouse or headland in sight. Triangulation tells him. Two points on land being taken for the base of the triangle, lines from these points, representing the other two sides of the triangle, are drawn until they intersect. That apex of the triangle will be the point where the observer is. Then the distance from his point to the land can be easily calculated.

The maritime wars under Napoleon disclosed the dangerous ignorance of French mariners about their own seacoast. French vessels were unable to break or run their enemies' blockade. After peace was established Beautemps-Beaupre was appointed as the organizer and chief of corps of engineers to chart the whole coast of France. His work was so well done that the other naval powers hastened to chart their own coasts according to his methods.

The head of a rock may easily escape ordinary soundings, or lie between soundings. When covered by ten or more feet of water and unmarked by ripples or breakers, it is hard to find. Even when known it is hard to get soundings. The lead may glide over it, so that even in well surveyed waters some unlucky ship out of hundreds passing there may "find the rock with its keel."

Groups of buoys with grappling irons are lashed together in long sweeping lines and sunk behind the small sounding boat until they touch bottom, and are then towed until they strike a rock. In calm weather rocks and reefs may be seen at great depths from great heights in balloons. Even after a rock has been discovered, its depth and position must be precisely ascertained. Fishermen, too, help make known these uncharted rocks, rewards being offered for all new ones discovered.

England, the United States, Spain, Italy and other maritime nations have adopted French methods. Japan for years has devoted to the subject its usual minute, trustworthy and masterful study, but has imitated the English crowded and complicated charts rather than the artistic execution of the French.—New York Tribune.

Toilet—Toylet.

In the "New World of Words," 1720, "toilet" is defined as "a kind of Tablecloth or carpet made of fine Linnen, Satin, Velvet or Tissue, spread upon a Table in a Bed Chamber where Persons of Quality dress themselves; a Dressing-cloth." A similar definition is given in Bailey's dictionary. The origin of the word is curious, for Cotgrave has: "See 'Toilette,' 'A toylet, the stuff which drapers lay about their cloths; also a bag to put nightgowns in.'" In the "Rape of the Lock," 1, 121, "toilet" seems used for the table and its contents:

And now, unveil'd, the toilet stands display'd,
Each silver vase in mystic order laid.

Giant Tomato Plants.

The largest tomato plants in the world are found in California. One grower has three plants which have reached a length of thirty feet. In three months from the time the seeds were planted the vines had climbed to the top of a twenty foot trellis. The trunks of these plants, says What to Eat, are one and a half inches in diameter and the foliage is thick and luxuriant. Enormous quantities of tomatoes have been picked from them and the fruit is of unusual size, possessing an extraordinary fine flavor.

Lava.

Lava may be blown into opaque bottles of gossamer lightness, and the harder sort makes a beautiful green glass of half the weight and double the strength of ordinary glass. But it is not always the same. Every volcano pours out its own special brand of molten mixture, disagreeable to walk on, but sometimes yielding precious products, as pumice stone. Lava, like all things, decomposes under the touch of time, as the fertile plains of Sicily testify.

Marriage.

"What I want," said the young man, "is to get married and have a peaceful, quiet home."

"Well," said Farmer Corntossel, "sometimes it works that way, and then again sometimes it's like joinin' a debatin' society."—Washington Star.

ADVERTISING.

One of the Many Marvels of This Progressive Age.

Among the many marvels of this marvelous age there is none more striking and none more characteristic than the art of advertising as developed in modern times. We talk much about the wonders of the telephone and the phonograph, about the astonishing expansion of railroads and telegraphy, but here we have an industry as remarkable for its extension and as wide and varied in its applications as anything of man's device in any era of the world's history. When there is brought into consideration the vast amount of money expended in advertising in our day, the novel and ingenius methods employed and the expert skill and artistic talent engaged in the business, one may begin to realize what a wide field has been opened here for some of the highest and most useful forms of human endeavor.

With all its abuses—and they are not a few—it remains true that advertising is one of the greatest of popular educators and one of the chief promoters of human happiness and prosperity, and there are yet many ways in which it may be extended to the still greater benefit of the world. No good reason exists why the churches, the Sunday schools, the missionary societies and other agencies of good should not advertise far more than they do and thus add to the membership and their power in the community. To set their advantages, aims and benefits before the public in a proper way and form would involve no loss of dignity or prestige, while it would almost certainly widen their influence.

The time must come, too, when the absurd code which prohibits physicians and other professional classes from advertising themselves must be abolished. There is nothing but a sentiment to prevent it and a very weak sentiment at that. It should be no more infra dig for a physician or a lawyer to seek patients or clients through the medium of print than it is for teachers, insurance men, real estate dealers or the members of any other honorable trade or calling.—Leslie's Weekly.

IMMORTALITY.

One Theory of the Condition That Comes After Death.

Our life does not begin with birth, nor does it conclude with death. It is only a section of the development of mankind before and after us. We existed before we were born, and we reap what the factors of our being have sown. So our life leaves its after effects, and they will be what we have made them.

The truth is that while there is no immortality in the sense in which most religions hold it if we accept their doctrines in their literal meaning, conditions in life are such in many respects, as if these doctrines were true. For, while our bodily existence is wiped out with all its physiological functions, the essential part of our own being (the thoughts themselves) remain, and thus our immortality—not as a concrete individual and bodily incarnation, but our soul, our character, the impulses which we have given in life to others, our aspirations and most characteristic features—cannot be wiped out.

A man who keeps this thought in his mind, either intuitively by realizing the power and justice of the religious instinct or by having fathomed the problem philosophically in its very depths, will not live for the present moment, but in consideration of the after effects which his life leaves on the world. And I would say that one of the best tests for right action in a critical situation is for a man to ask himself, If I had passed away from this life what would I wish that I had done in this emergency? I am confident that the answer given to this question would help us in the most difficult circumstances to find the right solution. —Dr. Paul Carus, Author of "The Soul of Man," "Chinese Philosophy," etc., in Monist.

Snails and Odors.

A professor in the University of Geneva says that snails perceive the odor of many substances, but only when not far away. In order to prove this it is necessary merely to dip a glass rod in a strongly smelling substance and bring it near the large tentacles of a snail in motion. If it is put close to these horns the tentacles are violently drawn back. As the animal perceives the odor it changes its course. Snails also smell by means of their skin. Contact is not necessary, for the mere vicinity of a perfume causes an indentation of the skin.

A Wise Scheme.

"No matter what opinion is offered, you express a contrary view," said the impatient friend.

"Well," answered Mr. Bliggins, "that's a way I have of acquiring knowledge. A man is more likely to give up all he knows on a subject if you get him to warm up with a little controversial indignation."—Washington Star.

His Influence.

"Do you think a man's influence lasts after he is gone?" asked the philosopher.

"Well, I should say!" cried the young woman. "My husband tied my property up so that I can't ever marry again!"—Detroit Free Press.

Some Things the Press Say of Republican Ticket.

"The strongest ticket named in 40 years."—Philadelphia North American.

"It was absolutely essential that the convention should nominate a ticket that would appeal with positive force to the whole party—one that, by its very construction and the mere presence of the individual selections, would enlist not only the personal interest of Republicans in every county, but their loyal and active support as well. This the convention has done."—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

"The distribution of the candidates is fair, but not what a great many Republicans of the western part of the state had hoped for. On geographical grounds we are not willing to concede that Philadelphia was entitled to the first place on the ticket. We had hoped to see Clearfield county get it. But the personnel of the Philadelphian is right and it is the man we should look at, after all, in the final summings up, and not the locality in which he lives."—DuBois Courier.

"We believe the ticket this day nominated will be triumphantly elected in November and we believe further that the great body of the people are so deeply interested in the upholding of President Roosevelt's hands that they will not only stamp their approval of his administration in the election of the state ticket, but also in the election of a practically solid delegation to congress."—Warren Mirror.

An Explanation from Col. Austin Curtin.

Editor of the Republican

I have learned through several persons that I pulled the rope which unveiled the Soldiers and Sailors Monument last Friday, thereby depriving the young lady, daughter of the late Joseph Fox the honor of performing that part of the ceremony. I wish to make a statement of the fact and I think those who know me, and know the interest I took in the matter, will hardly believe me capable of doing such a thing, when that part of the program had not been assigned to me.

The rope was fastened to a nail in the railing near to where I was standing on the platform, I noticed at once that unless some thing was done it would be pulled, as everyone big and little passing under it had to reach up and take hold of it, I caught hold of it and endeavored to hold it up high above the head of the crowd passing to and fro. I extended my right arm as far as I could and held until I was tired, waving my left hand to every one I saw catching the rope to make them let go, about 20 feet from me stood a great tall man who assisted me all he could holding it up the whole time, at the pedestal stood a member of one of the military companies who placed the rope on top of his cap thus assisting in holding it up, but in spite of all, some one pulled it and the flags came down at the wrong time.

The difficulty was that the person charged with the business of unveiling, fixing flags, rope and so forth did not do as he or they should have done. propped the rope up above the crowd with sticks or poles, thereby rendering it entirely safe from those passing under it from meddling with it.

I have gone into this rather at length wishing to be relieved of the blame of depriving Miss Fox the honor of unveiling the monument.

Fatal Auto Accident Occurs Near Wilcox.

There was a road accident, caused by an automobile frightening a horse, on the road between Johnsonburg and Wilcox which resulted in the death of Miss Biddy Goldberg at 9 o'clock Sunday evening.

The young lady was employed at Wilcox and in the afternoon she started to drive out in the country to visit her parents. She was accompanied by a young man named John Lingquist.

About 6 o'clock they met an automobile. The horse did not behave well as the machine approached, and Lindquist took the extra precaution to get out of the buggy and take the horse by the bit. The frightened animal broke away and ran. The young lady, who remained in the buggy, was thrown out violently and her skull fractured. She was taken in the automobile and hurried to the hospital at Ridgway, but she remained in an unconscious condition until she died.

When the horse showed increasing fright the machine was stopped, but the animal appeared to be uncontrolable.

Owen Jones, a member of the Penna. Reserve Corp and Chairman of the Memorial committee for the yearly decoration of the War Governors graves, was here at the Bush House for the ceremonies on Friday

Dr. Edward Harris, wife and little son Edward Humes Jr., of Butler, Pa., arrived in Bellefonte Wednesday evening to visit his parents Mr. and Mrs. John P. Harris, and to attend the Commencement exercises at State College.

G. H. Lichtenthaler Esq. and his son, of Philipsburg were in Bellefonte over Tuesday night on their way to attend the Commencement exercises at State College. The younger Mr. Lichtenthaler expects to enroll himself as a student at State next fall.

Hon. Theodore Rynder, editor of the Erie Echo, was here to attend the unveiling of the monument Friday. Capt. Rynder was an intimate friend of Governor Curtin and can relate many pleasing incidents of the War Governor's career. Capt. Rynder is the author of the agitation now going on to abolish the school tax and feels confident of ultimate success.

Another Suicide.

Charles King, a livery stable attache, committed suicide on Saturday of last week, by shooting himself in the head at Clearfield. He had been threatening suicide for several days. He was forty years of age and his home is at Millheim, to which place his body was sent.

Saturday afternoon after receiving $3 for the hire of a rig he took the money and went out and bought a revolver. Coming back in about 15 minutes he remarked to Frank Livingston and Thomas Horey, two other employes of the livery stable, that they would "have to do the feeding themselves" that evening and passed on back to the rear of the stable where he shot himself in the head. When Horey went back to the rear of the barn he found King lying on the floor moaning and the revolver lying at his feet. Help was called and he was carried into the office of the stable and several doctors sent for. Being conscious he was asked by Frank Leavy the reason he had shot himself and looking up at Mr. Leavy he said "I did it on purpose, Fred, turn me over and let me die," and to Dr. Gregory, who was standing near, he said "Good-bye doctor." He lived about an hour.

The Statue of the Great War Governor.

We have heard some criticism of the statue of Governor Curtin, due in each instance to a lack of knowledge of the period of his life intended to be particularly covered.

The criticism is to the youthful expression of the face. The expressions have been more of disappointment at not seeing a much older face, than of criticism and almost invariably is confined to those who knew him in his later years.

It should be understood that the intention of the Legislature as well as the committee in charge, and also of his family was to have the statue represent him as he appeared as Governor of Pennsylvania in the prime of his life and the vigor of his manhood and not as the venerable figure familiar to the generations which have come upon the stage since the close of the Rebellion.

The pose of the figure is beyond criticism for the reason that it is a characteristic which he retained to the last. It went with him from youth to advanced age while the lines and furroughs were not of this period and were not found in any picture or photograph of the Governor until the period succeeding the war.

The model from which the statue was cast underwent numerous changes before it was accepted. It was inspected by the family of the Governor, by Gen. Beaver, Col. A. K. McClure, Gen. Jno. I. Curtin, Col. Austin Curtin and by numbers of others who were life long friends and acquaintances and most competent to judge as to the correctness of the likeness.

The figure represents him in the history making period as he looked when Governor, not as minister to Russia member of the State Constitutional convention or Congressman from this district, when time had silvered his hair, dimned the luster of his eye and inclined his form. We should not expect to see the "old man" as he was lovingly called, but the "Great War Governor". The statue is true to history, and is satisfactory to those who will or can recall him as he appeared from 1860 to 1865. To get a contour of the face which it retained throughout life one needs to stand near the National Bank corner. This is the best view point as the face is slightly turned in that direction, from this position you will get the lines which age did not destroy and as you look the features will take on a very familiar appearance even to those who only knew him in his maturer years.

The artist has turned the head slightly to the side to avoid a stiffness or unnatural pose. It must be viewed from a distance, once you get the proper range there will be a feeling of pleasure and the face and figure will grow on you.

Of the man who "knocks" I am not speaking, he does not count, it is the man who has not thought that there was a Governor Curtin in the prime of his manhood in 1860.

When you look at the statue again remember it represents the War Governor during the War.

Arrested on Serious Charge.

Tuesday's Philipsburg Journal says: Gotlieb Kershtein, a married man and a native of Germany, who has for sometime been a resident of Rush township, just across the creek from Munson, has gotten himself into the toils of the law and unless he can demonstrate that he is an innocent man will likely spend some years at least in the penitentiary. The charge against him is that of rape and adultery, resulting in bastardy, made by Augusta Giesar, a young crippled girl, living in the same neighborhood, and who underwent the difficult operation for celio hysterotomy referred to in our columns a few days ago. Kershtein, hearing in some way that he was to be arrested in connection with this serious crime, pulled out for other climes. The effort made by the officers of the law to trace his whereabouts were successful. He was located at Cheswick, out near Pittsburg. Deputy Constable John Howell, of Munson, went to the latter place, found his man, placed him under arrest and brought him here yesterday. He was given a hearing before Justice B. J. LaPorte, and in default of $1,000 bail, was taken this morning by Howell to Bellefonte jail to await trial at the next criminal court.
